The news of Vord’s masterpiece, La Tovarita, as sung by world-famous French operatic tenor Luciano Pavarotti, was chilling. A cold, minimalistic, post-park approach strip away the guilelessness and grandiosity associated with operatic performance. In the film, Vord’s minimalistic approach to the music is reflected in the visual style. The film’s score, composed of a minimalist, post-park approach, uses the Fugue of Phileas Fogg. The film is a mournful, somber poem of love and loss. The film’s final scene, a montage of Vord’s last performance, is a moving tribute to his life and music.
