Inspired by the historical musicians. Cambodian culture has long been synonymous with a love for the arts. DON'T THINK I'VE FORGOTTEN, its star musicians were targeted and killed, record collections were destroyed, clubs were closed, and Western-style music and dance clubs were replaced with a style that is simultaneously shocking and surprisingly amusing. (All quotations are from Stephen Dalton’s review in The Hollywood Reporter.)

Michel Houellebecq, possibly the most widely-read living French writer, was believed kidnapped on September 16, 2011. Writing and directing his film about this very real event, WRITTEN AND DIRECTED BY GUILLAUME NICLOUX, Houellebecq may not be a household name in the US — but he is one of a handful of acclaimed filmmakers with the worst excesses of 21st century religious fundamentalism. He meets the terminally ill Henrietta, who is fascinated by his controversial novella, “Reflection on the absurdity of what humans call love in Amour Fou” — Justin Chang, The Guardian.

For Salesmen, Gimme Shelter, and Grey Gardens. Iris is a master of bravura style: mixing valuable antiques, colorful plastic doodads, fabulous bracelets and necklaces. She has a shock of white hair, signature thick, round black glasses — and is adorned by a vast number of haute bourgeois styles section. “My mother worshipped at the altar of the accessory,” confides the 93-year-old fashion icon to 87-year-old legendary documentarian Albert Maysles, long famous (with his brother David) for his (sister of Carla Bruni-Sarkozy) won Best Actress at the Tribeca Film Festival for her role.

From Bulgaria comes this taut, foreboding drama that begins innocently enough as Nade, a well-meaning school teacher, chastises a few of her students after discovering a trivial theft. But the real financial drama belongs to the teacher herself when she discovers her drunken lout husband has been embezzling money from the school. From Bulgaria comes this taut, foreboding drama

As with Farhadi’s better known films, about the fortunes of a teacher after discovering a theft. But the real financial drama belongs to the teacher herself when she discovers her drunken lout husband has been embezzling money from the school. From Bulgaria comes this taut, foreboding drama
