KAREN DALTON: IN MY OWN TIME

DIRECTED BY
ROBERT YAPKOWITZ AND RICHARD PEETE
EXECUTIVE PRODUCER: WIM WENDERS

Folk singer Karen Dalton (1937–1993): her raw, sublime talent, singular, sultry voice and hauntingly soulful performances were “elemental and wrenchingly true, as unadorned as the plains of Dalton’s native Oklahoma” — The Hollywood Reporter. Her music captivated the likes of Bob Dylan (“She had a voice like Billie Holiday’s and played guitar like Jimmy Reed”), Nick Cave, and Tim Hardin. Interweaving excerpts from her poetry and journals with moving interviews and rare archival performance clips, the filmmakers convey how Dalton’s fidelity to her music was as abiding as her aversion to commercialism or promotion. IN MY OWN TIME ensures the preservation of her musical legacy: “It introduces a one-of-a-kind artist to the uninitiated and celebrates her for aficionados. Above all it listens — and invites us to do the same.” — The Hollywood Reporter

ALFRED HITCHCOCK'S NORTH BY NORTHWEST

4K RESTORATION

(1959) “Crop dustin’ where there ain’t no crops,” the Mount Rushmore duel, the train going into the tunnel. Classic Hitchcock set-pieces just keep coming as Cary Grant’s Roger O. Thornhill (initials ROT) finds a simple case of mistaken identity snowballing into a breakneck chase across the country, menaced by James Mason and his goon squad, and aided, teased, and thwarted by Eva Marie Saint’s double (or triple?) agent. “Hitchcock’s sleek, wry, paranoid thriller caught the 50s zeitgeist perfectly: Cold War shadiness, secret agents of power, urbane modernism, the anti-like bustle of city life, and a hint of dread behind the sharp suits of affluence.” — Time Out

FRANCESCO ROSI'S ILLUSTRIOUS CORPSES

NEW 4K RESTORATION

(1976) Amid strikes and demonstrations, after an eerie tour of Palermo’s catacombs, with its 8,000 skeletons and mummified bodies, a judge is shot dead in broad daylight. But inspector Lino Ventura is on the case, and as judges keep dropping, he sees a pattern. Could this be a railroaded man’s vengeance? And after demotion and his own wiretapping, Ventura confronts the startling philosophy of Supreme Court judge Max von Sydow. “What impresses most are scenes displaying Rosi’s bravura: an obsessive judge shot in his tomb-like mansion; a party calculatedly shocking in its lavishness... The photography serves perfectly the growing sense of unease, and Ventura is as quietly excellent as ever.” — Time Out

THE VELVET UNDERGROUND

DIRECTED BY TODD HAYNES

“The first Velvet Underground album only sold 10,000 copies, but everyone who bought it formed a band.” — Brian Eno. The quintessential 1960s New York art-rock group, The Velvet Underground — Lou Reed, John Cale, Sterling Morrison, and Maureen Tucker — oozed cool, from their expressionless stage presence to their trancelike music and lyrics evoking sex, drugs, kink, and all things transgressive. With songs like “I’m Waiting for the Man,” “Venus in Furs,” and “Sister Ray,” they were a gritty riposte to hippiedom and an influence on rock for decades to come. Todd Haynes (who previously explored the many guises of Bob Dylan in I’M NOT THERE and glam rock in VELVET GOLDMINE) traces their origins, assembling a mind-boggling collage of underground movies (Stan Brakhage, Kenneth Anger, Tony Conrad) and Lower East Side performance art. Andy Warhol, the band’s Svengali, discovered Nico, the blond chanteuse whose deadpan beauty added to their mystique. “Fabulously entertaining.” — The Hollywood Reporter

WHEEL OF FORTUNE AND FANTASY

DIRECTED BY RYŪSUKÉ HAMAGUCHI

In this evocative triptych — three taut stories set in Tokyo about the mysteries and depths of women’s desires — coincidence seems as natural as the passing of time, and both are depicted in equal measure as whimsical and sharp: A fashion model discovers her friend is dating the ex who may have been her true love; a college student attempts to avenge humiliation by enlisting his lover to lure his sadistic professor into a “Me Too” situation; two middle-aged women make a poignant, enigmatic connection. Filmmaker Ryūsuke Hamaguchi homes in on deceptively simple moments, finely sketched to reveal the strangeness of true intimacy — unexpected, palpable, fleeting. “Seen individually, these moments feel like strange quirks of the universe, but the way they ripple across Hamaguchi’s three stories suggests nothing less than the fullness of life pushing through.” — IndieWire

SPEER GOES TO HOLLYWOOD

DIRECTED BY VANESSA LAPA

Albert Speer (1905-1981) was Minister of Armaments and War Production in Nazi Germany, but was better known simply as “Hitler’s architect.” One of two dozen major war criminals who sat in the docket at the Nuremberg

Trials, he was convicted of “crimes against humanity” for using slave labor and narrowly avoided execution; Speer spent 20 years in Spandau prison where he smuggled out writings that became Inside the Third Reich, a phenomenal worldwide bestseller. Well-educated, handsome, charismatic, and unfailingly narcissistic, he remarked to an international scrum of reporters, upon leaving prison: “You can see after 20 years, I’m still good-looking.” Vanessa Lapa (whose documentary on Himmler, THE DECENT ONE, we opened in 2014) picks up the story in 1971 as British screenwriter Andrew Birkin records 40 hours of audio tapes, detailing Speer’s delusional retelling of his life, with the aim of selling the story to Paramount Pictures. SPEER GOES TO HOLLYWOOD is a case study in monstrous denial, an example of how intelligence and self-awareness need have nothing in common.

MOHAMMAD REZA ASLANI'S CHESS OF THE WIND

NEW 4K RESTORATION

(1976) In an ornate, candlelit mansion in 1920s Tehran, the heirs to a family fortune vie for control of their matriarch’s estate — erupting in a ferocious final act. Screened publicly just once before it was banned, then lost for decades. “The opulent, claustrophobic interiors are reminiscent of Persian miniatures... The influence of European cinematic masters like Pasolini, Visconti and Bresson is also apparent. The sound design also stands out: wolves howl and dogs bay as they circle the house, ratcheting up the sense of menace; crows caw, jangling the nerves; heavy breathing makes the characters’ isolation in this haunted house increasingly oppressive. The soundtrack — an early work by trailblazing female composer Sheyda Gharachedaghi — takes inspiration from traditional Iranian music, and sounds like demented jazz.” — The Guardian
