Robert J. Lifton: renowned psychiatrist, author, founder of the Tavistock Institute on Psychology and Social Change, and director of the Center for the Study of Violence at the New School for Social Research. His 1986 book, The Nazi Doctors: Medical Killing and the Psychology of Genocide, is widely regarded as one of the most important works on the psychology of perpetrators of genocide. Lifton spent over 40 years researching and writing about the psychology of perpetrators and victims of violence, and his work has been influential in fields as diverse as psychology, history, and public policy. His research has contributed to our understanding of the psychology of perpetrators of violence, and has helped to shape policies for the prevention of violence and the promotion of peace. Robert J. Lifton is a testament to the power of scholarship to make a difference in the world.
